Hi All,

Thank you so much for the interest shown for the training program and I apologize for the broken link. Students should be able to register here now. I also wanted to answer a few common questions about the program.

1. This is a training series for student leaders interested in higher education affordability advocacy and policy so non-sga student group leaders are very welcome!

2. This first training will be recorded, but I encourage folks to reach out to student governments before the school year starts so student leaders can incorporate the information into their planning process. If there are any other questions or issues with the link don't hesitate to reach out!

All the best

Cailyn

> Hi All!As everyone's working hard to get their plans ready for Fall semester more than a few people have been asking for ways to engage students in your work. If you're looking for ways to introduce your student government to textbook affordability and open textbooks, we have a free training opportunity for student government leaders that will help set them up to advocate on these issues. We're launching a new free webinar series for student government leaders through the Student Government Resource Center, which is a project of the Student PIRGs.

There are three trainings:Affordable Higher Ed Landscape Briefing: a broader look at places where student governments can make an impact at a campus, local, or federal levelPlanning impactful campaigns: I'll be using an affordable textbooks campaign to illustrate the principles of goal setting, strategy, and visibilityStrategy Feedback Workshop: This will build off the second training and give student leaders a chance to "Shark tank" a campaign plan with a full time organizing director and receive feedback. The first training is July 21st at 4PM est over Zoom. Interested student government leaders can register here.
