They returned my phone call. They provided more details regarding why they didn't register for courses. It came down to trying to take a specific welding course at Tehachapi, but couldn't due to a prerequisite. They worked with the Tehachapi counselors to draft an appeal, but it appears the request fell through the cracks. I mentioned trying to obtain some answers about what might have happened so they can hopefully continue the process so the student can eventually sign up for the course they wish to take

Can't figure out how. Your website thinks I am not a real person. Or couldn't verify my identity after going around and around in link circles it says I have to go in person somewhere with my id but it's not clear where. This county is large and spread out and this is highly inconvenient. I am obviously a real person responding to this survey. Very annoying.

Spoke on the phone. They expressed frustration during the application process and that they received an email stating they had input incorrect information. I offered to email them our detailed steps to complete the enrollment process and they accepted. They mentioned not knowing when they'd have the chance to complete the application, but agreed to reach out if they experienced any difficulty.

Spoke on the phone. They mentioned still being concerned with money, but after briefly speaking, they mentioned an interest in returning to college. I offered to guide them through that process and send them an email with steps to complete registration, along with contact information for our various support departments.

Spoke on the phone and confirmed that they are worried about time and needing to prioritze working over attending school. I mentioned the option to enroll in less units and possibly taking online courses in order to stay in the routine of college. They appreciated that option. I sent them an email with steps to complete registration, along with a link to the current late-start course offerings and the contact information for our support depts.
